I'm asking that cell phone use in flight remain banned.

I am a flight attendant with ATA. It is my opinion that to allow cell phone use during flights would pose safety, security, and comfort risks.

While the use of phones would s allow terrorists to easily comunicate and plot with each other on the plane and with those on the ground it is probably not going to happen often.

What will happen each and every day on each and every flight are customers creating a nuisance. There will be people all over the plane talking on the phone annoying those sitting around him/her. These people will not just be annoying, their voices will prevent themselves and those around them from hearing Crew PAs. It is not an exageration that customers will get into physical altercations with each other.

Air travel is stessfull and frustrating enough already. Add having the person sitting next to you on the phone and life on an air plane will become completely inntolerable even chaotic. Air rage will become a daily problem putting crew, passengers and equipment at risk when someone finally has had "enough".
